All songs written by, performed by, and produced by Brandon Lien.

Music for lonely nights.

I didn't think that this album would take so long to make, but it was all worth it. A lot of time, emotion, and work was poured into this; I hope you enjoy it. I want to thank my friends and family for their support of this madness. They gave feedback on the songs, shared it with their friends, helped me shoot the music video- I don't know what I'd do without them. Thanks again.

LYRICS AND POETRY

51 Degrees

It was on a night like this
That we wandered the streets
It was 51 degrees
Just you and me
Just you and me.

Just you and me
51 degrees

Match

Misty green sunshine
Surely kaleidoscopic
For my eyes to see.

And the Catacombs Cry Back

The shadows slip through between the blinds at midnight
Together, hand in hand, they dance in the moonlight
They all seem to delight in sharing this with me
Quite frankly, company is company.

But I think that the winds tonight are cruel.
Their howling laughter marks forlorn fools
Those who seek to rekindle faltering embers
While memory instead chooses to dismember.

And though I can't find my voice
I call out to keep it intact
Echoes fill the chasm
And the catacombs cry back.

The scabs are ripped wide open again
Emotional evisceration

Flowers

She handed me flowers.
The moment was ours alone.
Stems shaped like a wishbone.
But it was in my own hands where blissfully unaware
I snapped the stems. And there they lay.
I had begun to say
"Goodbye" to her, and "Maybe we might be able to see each other" solemnly. Then I started to walk outside when some blooms caught my eyes yearning.
Words really mean nothing.

Warm Showers On a Summer Night

In and out of sleep, one eye open
Because I can't bear to see us when we're drifting apart
I don't know why melancholy lies
As if something in me died tonight in my dreams
I'm living a painting, I'm soaking in the brisk dawn
Before it fleets away, just like my thoughts
I'm awake alone, time as slow as clouds
The sweet sounds of solitude sing so loud.

Warm showers on a summer night. (4x)

To Relive In Flashes

It feels as if some warmth left me tonight.
Painless permeating numbness keeping the memories of yesteryear out of sight, regardless if I'm awake or sleeping.

Blindfolds stop truth from bleeding through my eyes-
Those words forever branded in my mind-
Take the last ounce of hope and elegize-
Nostalgia's lenses become misaligned-

A meandering reverie smashes
Time's hoard of emotions entirely
To let go means to relive in flashes
But I don't want the regrets to haunt me
Drifting to Bowie's Ashes to Ashes
If it happened, it happened; c'est la vie.
